Happy Friday!

This week in English, children were introduced to our new book, Tar Beach. Children used the present progressive tense to write sentences detailing what they could see on the front cover and then used modal verbs and conjunctions to explain what this might/could mean about the book and its characters.

We have now come to the end of our multiplication and division unit in maths. Children completed an end of unit assessment, as well as further assessments covering what we've learnt so far in Year 4.

We enjoyed a great afternoon collaging in art this week. Children took inspiration from Henry Matisse's The Circus to 'draw with scissors'.

In history, children researched the many achievements of the ancient Maya. They then drew their own conclusion as to which of these they thought was the most important, offering justification for their decision.

We were role-playing in RE this week, to show how Jesus' teachings are reflected in the actions of Christians today.

In computing, we continued to use count-controlled loops to create regular 2D shapes.

Wishing you all a lovely weekend!
Miss Hale
